The internationalisation of academic studies and research is a strong point at USMB, a powerful tool for development and an important element of its reputation. USMB is regularly ranked among the best universities in France for its outgoing mobility, as proved by its Erasmus ranking (Number 1 University in France for its outgoing mobility since 2008/2009). The reputation of a university where students do not hesitate to go abroad for further training is well established. It is necessary to maintain this result which, beyond the reputation itself, is of real benefit to its students.

A university on a human scale, USMB offers services, courses and research opportunities which should guarantee the best level of integration for international students into our university. However, USMB results on incoming mobility, while at a good level, are lower than those obtained for outgoing mobility. USMB suffers from a general lack of awareness abroad of the opportunities it offers.

To counteract this problem, USMB has been working in different directions for several years. Staff members of USMB will present you some of their good practices on internationalisation. They will share with you some innovative ways to develop middle-sized universities attractivity and visibility on the international scene, etc.
